NKUST Researchers among the World's Top 2% Scientists on Stanford University List

A recently published list of the world's top researchers has reinforced the National Kaohsiung University of Science and Technology's reputation as a top-tier research university.

The research team collected data on nearly 8 million scientists worldwide, divided them into 22 fields and 176 sub-discipline fields, and identified the ranking of more than 100,000 of the 2% most-cited scientists across all scientific fields.

The list of the top 2% most-cited scientists included two categories: career-long citation impact (1960-2020) and single-year impact (2020).

The first category was based on the number of times a researcher's articles are cited from the first year of publication to 2021 within their specialty areas throughout their careers. Thirty-one current and former NKUST faculty were included in this career-long citation impact category.

The second category used the same calculation but only took a single year – 2020 into account. The research team evaluated an Aug 1, 2021 snapshot of Scopus, the largest abstract and citation database of peer-reviewed literature. Thirty-two NKUST faculty were among the top 2% for a single year, and 18 of them were also listed in the first category.

Congratulations to the listed faculty members!
