Yi-Jih Dormitory Is Ready to Welcome Students

The old Yi-Jih dormitory built in 1975 has become good memory of many alumni. Considering the building has stood on the campus for 40 years, the University began planning the demolition of the old building and re-construction of the new dorm on the same site in 2015.

The work eventually ended up taking some seven years, being overseen by many different deans of Student Affairs and deans of General Affairs. Moreover, the total expenses raised from 260 million to 320 million.

The new Yi-Jih dormitory includes 668 beds, of which four are wheelchair-accessible beds, and this will be enough for the number of incoming new students in the 2022-2023 academic year. On each floor, walls were painted with different colors to create diverse and lively vibes, and an outdoor balcony gave students more public space to walk by, communicate, and enjoy the beautiful views.

At the opening ceremony of the new Yi-Jih Dormitory, the University invited alumni to share their fun memories while living in the old Yi-Jih dormitory.

Many alumni were pleased to see the new dorm taking the baton and becoming a part of the University experience for these young students. At last, they wished young students to do their best to utilize university resources and thrive in their academy.
